THE ATTEMPTED SUICIDE OF MAGALDO.

A visit to the hospital of Sing Sing Prison yester-day found Donato Magaldo (whose efforts to deprive himself of life last Wednesday have been fully described in these columns) in a cheerful and rather communicative mood, and although he evidently desired to conceal his ruture intentions, he was apparently frank in replying to numerous interrogatories bearing on his bloody attempt at self-murder. Shortly after Magaldo had been admitted into the prison it was found on examination by the physician in charge that the wound on his throat, although laying bare the windpipe, had leit that important canal untouched, while from the stab indicted just above the sternum it was for some time feared that internal hemorrhage would produce death. Since then, however, both wounds have healed, and there is now no probability of any fatal results. In answer to a question put to him by a prison official yesterday the convict gave him to understand that he would not again attempt to take his own life, but his assurance in this particular does not warrant a large amount of credence, as at the dinner hour later in the day one of the nurses saw Magaldo steathily take a knife and twice feel of its edge, then giance. years the payment of six per cent interest on st. 380,000, on certain conditions to be agreed to by by the companies holding the charters from the respective governments. bloodthirsty Italian, warrant those around him in the belief that he yet meditates dying by his own hand.

On entering the hospital a signal from the physical caused the would-be sucide to be by the signal from the cot on which he had been recibiling and advance with a broad smile on his somewhat sinister features. He had just partaken of a comiortable diner, which might perhaps account for his seeming good lumor. As Magaldo dees not understand English, an interpreter was called, through whom the following particulars were communicated:—(In being interrogated as to what instrument he used in the Tombs his reply was, "A narrow-bladed table knife." which had been furnished him with his food, shortly before he left for Sing Sing. The act, he stated, was done in a moment of despair and without any premeditation, but with a determination to kill himself. Regarding the occurrence immediately afterwards, he stated that he washed the blood from his throat, concealing the injury by tying his handkerchief round his neck, by which the act was not discovered until he was on the railroad. He also says that the knife with which he inflicted the stab penetrated the lower part of his throat to a depth of more than four inches—a story too improbable for belief. Having been asked why he told a fellow convict on the night of his arrival at Sing Sing that an ink-craser was the instrument he used on his throat, he persistently denied having said so; and when allusion was made to his tring the edge of a knife, a shrug of his shoulders, accompanied with a smile of indifference, was the only reply.

Magaldo, through the interpreter, labored to convince his auditors that he was now willing to work and endeavor to secure the good will of his keepers. While a close watch is kept upon Magaldo it is generally conceded that if he still clings to the thought of suicide he will not have to wait many days ere opportunity will enable him to complete his last attempt at taking life. ALBANY, Feb. 25, 1809.

The introduction of a series of resolutions by Mr. Husted, from the Committee on Federal Relations, favoring the repeal of the Tenure of Office law, gave rise to quite a party discussion, in which it was difficult to discover anything of particular importance to the interest of the State. The origin of the debate was the introduction of very abusive language in the resolutions referred to relative to Andrew Johnson. They were severely attacked as unwarrantable and untrue by several of file democratic members and defended by Mr. La Bair and Mr. Husted. Mr. La Bair and Mr. Husted. A defence of Andrew Johnson, at this hour and in this place, to the exclusion of business effecting many important interests of New York, does not appear quite pertinent; neither did the abusive appendage to the resolutions of the Committee on Federal Relations, which called it out, come in proper shape. Nevertheless, an hour or more of valuable time was wasted in the discussion of the long-settled question as to which party owns Andy Johnson and which should be most proud of his virtues and most ashamed of his political vices. The discussion was long protracted, and was fillibustered through on questions of parliamentary rule until the hour of adjournment arrived. The real question is absorbing a good deal of the attention of the Legislature. Mr. Ray, of Ontarlo, proposes to reduce the canal toll from tide-water to the West. His views have been met with much opposition, especially on the part of Judge Miller, of Senaca, who urges an amendment that in order most effectually to reduce the price of cost, all duties on that article shall be removed. It is caumed that to reduce the toll would only have the effect of impoverishing the canals, and would do more benefit to other States than to our own, as large quantities of coal brought by the Erie Canal is carried into the States of Ohlo, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan.

The adjourned meeting of the convention of Irish Civic Societies of Kings county was held at Emmet's Hotel, Canton street, hear Myrtie avenue, last evening, for the purpose of completing the arrangements for the celebration of St. Patrick's Day. Mr. John Cunningham, president of the convention, presided, and Thomas O'Connor officiated as secretery of the meeting. The roll of delegates was called and was responded to by representatives of twenty societies, after which the minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Thomas Fagan, chairman of the Committee on Line of March, submitted the following as the route decided upon by that committee:—The right to rest on Park avenue, corner of Canton street, and countermarch down Park avenue to Hudson avenue, thence to the City Hall, where it will be reviewed by the Mayor and members of the Common Council; through Court street to Hamilton avenue, to Columbia street, to Harison street, to Hicks street, to Atlantic avenue, to Classon avenue, to Wyrlie avenue, to Washington Park, where they will be reviewed by the Grand Marshal and dismiss. The report was unanimously adopted by the meeting. A nominating committee, consisting of one from each delegation, was then appointed to select for the action of the convention the names of candidates for the office of grand marshal and two aids for the 17th of March. RECEPTION BY SENATOR CARL SCHURZ.

Senator Carl Schurz, of Missouri, received the members of the German Republican General Committee last night, to the number of 110, at the residence of Dr. Abraham Jacobi, No. 110 West Thirty-ourth street. The president of the committee, Sigismund Kaufmann, being unable to attend on secount of illness, his place was filled by the vice pres Mr. Henry Merz, who read the following addr General Schurz on the part of the committee:—

Mr. Henry Merz, who read the following address to General Schurz on the part of the committee:—
THE GERMAN REPUBLICAN GENERAL COMMITTER OF THE STATES AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK TO UNITED STATES SHATOR GABL SCHURZ.
The German Republican General Committee halls your entrance into the Senste of the United States as one of the most important events in the progress of our republic. As a pariet, as a political leader, as a gifted orator and a volunteer solder in the cause of preserving and ennobling the Union, your name is already inscribed in brilliant colors on the pages of her history. While we as citizens of this country rejoice at this, we at the same time recognize in you the representative of the German American element in its true rignificance. In the work of porfecting this mighty are the same time recognize in you the representative of the German and creeds are invited by our rependent end is and, nations and creeds are invited by our rependent of the demans. The sold on which industry and commerce, science and art and liberal ideas of humanity flourish is sown with German earnestness and shows the fruits of German genins. It is your great merit as the representative of the German-american element to carry out the same work nobly and gloriously in the field of national politics. The exalted destiny of our republic can be fulfilled only by perfectly hamonizing all the elements in the spirit of the fundamental principles of our political system. Nour election, the free, hearty and homest expression of the will of the young Kmpire Suite of the West, is conclusive evicience that his idea is illustrated and the state of the west, is conclusive evicience that his idea is illustrated and homest expression of the will of the young find the remained of the country. We great you, therefore, aster population of the great republic, you will push forward with a still stronger hand the work of humanity.

hand the work of humanity.

General Schurz responded briefly, thanking the committee for the honor they had conterred upon him, and assuring them that no matter what might be the changes in the political firmament his countrymen would ever find him enlisted in the cause of aumanity and ready at all times to sacrifice eyery personal consideration for the welfare of the country personal consideration for the wehate of the country of his adoption.

Mr. Schurz was then presented personally to each member of the committee, after which the evening was spent in social converse.

SERIOUS BOARDING HOUSE FIGHT.

An Officer Feleniously Assaulted While Endeavoring to Quell the Disturbance—He Shoots His Desperate Assailant.

As officer Hugh Donohue, of the Twenty-second precinct, was patrolling his post on Broadway, near Frity-fourth street, last evening about seven o'clock, he was accosted by an excited person, who informed him that a serious fight was going on in a boarding house in that vicinity, and asked him to hurry to the place and quiet the belligerents. Donohue immediately repaired to the house, and found several of the immates engaged in a serious broil, during which broken noses and cut faces had been liberally bestowed. He at once instituted measures to restore order, when one of the more prominent members of the fighting party—Matthew Donovan—suddenly turned upon him, and, indulging in the most serious threats, struck him a terribollow on the head, which sent him reeling headlong down a long flight of stairs. His desperate assailant, not contented with extending this rough reception, grasped an ugly looking kulie, and, brandising it wildly about, rushed after the officer with the intention undoubledly of using it upon him, when that official fortunately recovered sufficiently from the effects of the terrible blow he had received to realize his dangerous position before Donovan reached him, and, feeling that energetic measures were necessary quickly drew his revolver and sent a ball whizzing towards that individual, which struck him in the left arm rendering it poweriess. This effectually squelched Donovan's evident desire to maim or murder the officer, and so soon as circumstances allowed he was arrested, taken to the station house and locked up. He will be arraigned this morning at the Jefferson Market Police Court, before Justice Ledwith, to answer the charges of feloniously assaulting the officer and obstructing him in the discharge of his duty. During the evening there was considerable excitement in the neighborhood many of the rames regarding the afray being greatly exagger

THE STORM.

About seven o'clock resterday morning the most disagreeable snow storm of the present winter set in and continued without intermission throughout the day, to the intense disgust of almost everybody who lived at the "times herein specified" in the besiobered metropolis. Rain would have been welcouned as a sort of southing genial indicence, compared with the shower of slop that descended like a heavy veil all day and council to everything it touched. As a rule, it came do No. down with a cleamy all day and c. ung to everything it touched. As a rule it came do Na, down, down, with a claiminy drip, varied at intervals in its course-by slight winds that directed its firsh to an angre of forty-five degrees, and then it reanaged to instinute itself in the eyes and ears of per extrans and dropped down maide their shirt and a but collars. The whole city was covered with sinan, and the city railroad companies brought their snow ploughs into requisition, sending the "batter" six rives on ether side the tracks like a luge muddy wave. In the earlier half of the day it was verificate abow, in such a moist condition, however, as to merely suggest that the sun had war med the upper side of the snow clouds a little-tou much. Toward evening, the word "storm" weshed only definition that could be given it, for it was a either rain nor snow, and yet it was both, but of the most contemptible qualities. It was delignifically mixed, though, and no complaint could justify be in de that the congesied and fluid bodies were not family proportioned. A genius on the City Hall steps of cred to bet that there was more rain than snow, basing his hopes of winning upon the acute observation that that the specific gravity of the raindrops exceeded that of the snowlakes, and that as they descended faster he presumed that a greater number of drops than fakes reached terra firms within a given period. Immediate steps will be taken to catabilish a municipal meteorological department, and the betting philosopher will be appointed to a lucant ve position therein with a view to creating a sybe te in which his talents may be utilized.

The Storm in Brooklyn.

The juvenile portion of the community appeared to be the only ones which did not look upon the snow storm yesterday with the most intense disgust. While people were trudging along half blinded with the failing flakes the little fellows shouted and laughed in the most joyous manner, watching their opportunity to give some old fogy a good snowballing. It was disagreeable overhead, very disagreeable under foot, and but few persons were out, especially the ladies, except those who were compelled to be. The cars ran pretty regularly, but rairoud-companies were compelled to put on extra horses, and the poor animals felt the heavy strokes of the lash frequently. The cars were jammed throughout the day with a dripping crowd, whose faces looked as if they had never known a smile.
